Accessing Employment and Education

We have been helping people with disability or disadvantage find and maintain employment since 2003. Our large network of employers across many different industries are looking for employees of all abilities. We can assist clients to identify and build skills and interests, connect them with training courses or study, help them to choose a career path, source work experience placements, build a resume, and much more.

Therapeutic Supports (Psychology)

atWork Australia has been delivering professional psychology services in Western Australia for more than 16 years, building resilience and improving wellbeing. Our experienced team can offer therapy (general psychology), counselling (general), vocational counselling, and community engagement assistance.

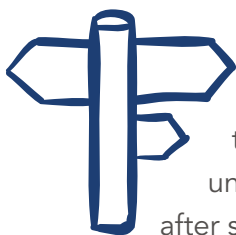

Positive Behaviour Support

Our highly experienced psychologists work in partnership with clients to address behaviours of concern. The aim of this support is to improve confidence through increased skills and emotional regulation, in order to manage and reduce behaviours that may be deemed inappropriate, challenging or unsafe.

Delivered in a respectful, positive and inclusive way, these strategies can see clients enjoy improved relationships, increased participation in their community, and a sense of empowerment and independence over their own lives.

School Leaver Employment Supports (SLES)

atWork Australia supports students and their parents to prepare for the transition from school to work. We understand that the transition to life after school can feel overwhelming. With the assistance of a dedicated Employment Advisor, health and wellbeing coaching, interview skills training and resume preparation, we work with students to discover what future employment opportunities are available and right for them.

Community Participation

Participation in the community and social connection with others plays a vital role in wellbeing and self-confidence. atWork Australia supports NDIS participants to access community activities including social gatherings, sporting clubs, charities and special interest groups. These activities can assist individuals to develop confidence, facilitate social inclusion, form connections, build skills, undertake volunteer or work experience, and establish a routine in daily life.
